Funding opportunities for graduate studies in Philosophy at LSE

The Department

The Department of Philosophy, Logic and Scientific Method is an exciting place to study philosophy. The department, founded in 1946 by Sir Karl Popper, is internationally recognised for its excellence. It offers four Masters Programmes and a PhD Programme. The Department is closely associated with both the Centre for the Philosophy of the Natural and the Social Sciences and the Institute of Philosophy of the School of Advanced Study, which host leading visiting scholars and support a range of research projects, seminars and lecture series. This creates an active intellectual environment with students working in general philosophy of science, philosophy of physics, philosophy of economics, philosophy of social science, philosophy and public policy, rational choice and scientific methodology.

PhD Scholarships

LSE Philosophy Scholarship

The LSE Philosophy Scholarship, offered by the Department, covers tuition fees and living expenses of £13,000 per annum for three years, with the possibility of an extension for a fourth year, to support students undertaking research in philosophy within the Department.

LSE PhD Scholarships

The LSE offers a number of full scholarships for new PhD students. The scholarships cover tuition fees and living expenses of £13,000 per annum for three years. The Department will put forward promising candidates for this Scholarship.

AHRC Doctoral Awards and BPS PhD Scholarships

Both the Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC) and the British Society for the Philosophy of Science (BPS) offer PhD scholarships for which students can apply through the Department.
